IN THE REALM OF THE FEMININE

Various Soaps

If a woman wanted to spend a good deal of time over her personal looks, she could use half a dozen sorts of soaps a day, and benefit.
But life is short, and most of us have too many things to do to

For rough, spotty skins, full of blackheads, liquid green soap—there are several sorts of this, bought by the bottle in drug stores.
For dark skins, a soap with peroxide or lemon, to bleach it.

To make the skin of the body soft and white, a soap with almond in it.

To make the skin very soft and smooth, an oatmeal soap.

To wash dark hair, a tar soap.

For blonde hair, a borax soap.

Plain, ordinary scrubbing soap, the kind known as "yellow soap," is excellent for washing dandruff and dirty scalps—it cleanses perfectly, and will not hurt the hair, since it is, of course, rinsed out thoroughly.

A good rule is to pay at least twenty-five cents a cake for a face soap, and only five or ten cents for bath soap. The skin of the face is more delicate than that of the body, and needs more care.
Do not be afraid of getting soap into your skin—it's good for it. But take care that it is all rinsed out, the harm of any soap is there—and never buy perfumed soaps unless you know exactly what's in them, and that they are pure.

Questions and Answers

How far do you think that a girl's nails should project from the finger tips? Is there any excuse for a girl trimming her nails down to the flesh, unless she is too lazy to keep reaching under them with the orange-wood stick? The enclosed watercolor sketches will show you that my nails are the short and broad ones, while the others are my sister's and are the flatter, shaped ones. Wouldn't you suggest that I allow my nails to grow considerably more than hers, to offset their shortness?—Eva.

Reply—Far be it from me to want to create any family friction, especially over such trifles as nails. But since you ask, and I am at such a safe distance, I dare be candid enough to tell you that your idea is all right, and if your sketches are perfect, your nails are the prettiest, even if they are flatter. This is simply because you have a better idea of symmetry. Hers would be much improved by an extra length, and yours would look better if you filed them very close on the sides.

Will it injure a baby's eyes if it sleeps so the light shines directly on its face?— Nurse.
Reply—The baby's eyes should always be shaded—awake or asleep.
